2. Camp No. 92 at Yelabuga on the Kama River held approximately 4,000 Wehrmacht officers but was emptied on 10 July 1946, as Japanese officer PWs were being brought there. During its use as a camp for German officers no one above the rank of captain was released; field officers were considered mentally active even if physically incapacitated.
3. PWs in Camp No. 165 in the suburbs of Moscow were put to work constructing railroad installations and were supervised by fellow PWs. ANTIFA PWs from the camp underwent a three months' course at a school in Moscow. If successful, they were then sworn in "auf Stalin". These trained PWs are not returned to their homes in Germany but employed in the Russian Zone. ANTIFA PWs receive officers' rations, e.g., 150 gr. tobacco every ten days.
4. PWs in Camp No. 57 in Memel are employed on building power plants and paper works. Their rate of pay, which is theoretical, is 12 - 18 rubles per day, but they rarely receive it. ANTIFA PWs always received their full pay.
